Acrobatica Lands in Luxembourg: The Italian Rope-Access Construction Leader Expands into the Grand Duchy

We are proud to announce that, as of the 30th of June, we have officially launched our operations in Luxembourg. This marks another step forward in the company's growth and expansion path, which already includes operations in Italy, France, Spain, Monaco, the United Arab Emirates, and Saudi Arabia.

Anna Marras, CEO of EdiliziAcrobatica S.p.A., commented:

“This opening marks a new cornerstone for our international expansion. We chose Luxembourg strategically because it allows us to easily reach other European countries like Belgium, the Netherlands, and Germany, where we are confident we will achieve the same success we have seen elsewhere. Our success is rooted in a business model that is perfectly replicable and scalable. A model built, above all, on the people within our Group — which in the last 10 years has grown from just over 100 to more than 3,000 employees. It's also a model that never loses sight of our end customers' needs, anticipating their demands and expectations.”

Founded in Genoa 31 years ago by skipper Riccardo Iovino, Acrobatica is now led by Anna Marras and operates in over 175 locations across Italy and abroad — with Luxembourg now joining that list. The company specializes in rope-access maintenance, restoration, and renovation work, operating in both civil construction and the restoration of historic monuments. The skill and reliability of its professionals have earned it international recognition. Recently, Acrobatica was invited to train young Jordanian restorers in Petra, working on the tomb of Sextus Florentinus. Currently, some of its teams are active at the archaeological site of Paestum.
